Attorney Raul Alvarez appointed to DRI Construction Law Steering Committee

Miami –Clarke Silvergate, P.A., is pleased to announce that attorney Raul A. Alvarez has been appointed to the Defense Research Institute (DRI) Construction Law Steering Committee. The Construction Law Committee brings together attorneys whose practices encompass the full range of construction-related legal matters. Its members represent owners, developers, contractors, subcontractors, architects, engineers, manufacturers, suppliers, insurers, and other construction industry participants. The committee provides educational programming and professional resources addressing construction defects, contract disputes, project delays, worksite accidents, professional liability, insurance claims, litigation, and dispute resolution.

“I am honored to join the DRI Construction Law Steering Committee,” Alvarez said. “I look forward to collaborating with construction law attorneys nationwide, contributing to the committee’s educational and professional initiatives, and helping advance the exchange of ideas on issues affecting our clients and the construction industry.”

Clarke Silvergate is a Miami-based civil litigation firm representing corporations throughout Florida and beyond. The firm handles sophisticated matters in state and federal courts, arbitrations, and appeals, and is committed to providing clients with high-quality legal services, responsiveness, efficiency, and practical solutions.
